CardLogix × Technijian — the managed wrap that completes the card

A one-page concept for a channel partnership Nick Schooler and Technijian framed on May 29. It is a proposal to react to, not a commitment — and it is separate from CardLogix's own co-managed IT, which can proceed on its own.

Why now

Strong MFA has moved from recommended to required in three waves — federal, then state/local and law enforcement (CJIS, mandatory since Oct 1, 2024), and now private companies pushed by cyber-insurance renewals. CardLogix's PIV / FIDO2 / FRAC credentials are exactly what these buyers must adopt. What they still lack is a partner to deploy and operate the environment around the card — the gap HID closes with its ecosystem and CardLogix cannot close alone.

The partnership

CardLogix supplies the credential and owns the customer. Technijian wraps the managed IT, 24/7 managed detection and response (MDR), the CJIS-aligned compliance program, and the HSM-backed managed certificate authority around it — and the two co-sell a complete answer to CJIS-bound agencies and insurance-driven private firms. Neither side tells this story alone today.

The economics — an opening position

Model	What CardLogix gets	Who delivers & carries risk
Referral	Up to 10% of the gross monthly service invoice — ongoing	Technijian contracts, delivers, owns the SLA
Resale	Your own markup; you set retail	Technijian wholesales to you and operates it

100% of hardware revenue stays with CardLogix, delivery-side exposure is essentially zero either way, and the partnership adds a recurring margin stream on hardware you already sell. Exact split is a short negotiation, not a prerequisite.

Why Technijian — and how the risk is contained

- Local — Irvine Spectrum, five minutes away; operating since 2000; a dedicated team per client.
- Eight compliance frameworks today (HIPAA, SOC 2, PCI, CMMC/DFARS, GDPR, NIST CSF, CIS, ISO 27001).
- CJIS is an honest near-term build on the CMMC practice already run — a dated, months-not-years plan, scoped to one pilot before any multi-agency commitment, with US-based, background-screened staff on any CJI-touching work.

We do not claim a CJIS delivery practice we have not earned — the partnership is exactly what would justify standing it up.

The ask: one 30-minute conversation to decide whether to run a single joint pilot — one LE agency, cards plus the managed wrap — and prove the motion before anything scales. Nothing here commits CardLogix.
